

BAM = BAM (Bundesanstalt für Materialforschung und-prüfung certification), also known as the Federal Institute for Materials Research and Testing, is an internationally recognized research and materials testing organization under the German government's Federal Ministry of Economics and Technology. BAM certification is viewed around the world as an independent statement of quality, and certifications are awarded to select organizations based on rigorous analysis of performance data, random film sampling and testing and periodic on-site manufacturing audits.